Plaintiffs invest 21 pages in a vain attempt to prove that this Court's decision in Cook v. Luckett, 575 F. Supp. 485 (S.D. Miss. 1983), is bad law. Neither Shady Grove Orthopaedic Assocs. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 559 U.S. 393 (2010), nor any decision of the Fifth Circuit undermines it in any way. This Court's decision to avoid the time and expense of an unnecessary class certification proceeding was sound law then, and it remains sound law now, properly applicable to this case.

Plaintiffs attempt to evade Cook and the Fifth Circuit precedents on which it relied by emphasizing the unprecedented breadth of the mandatory injunction they seek, which would require Sheriff Tucker "to, inter alia, maintain comprehensive records of the MCSD's law enforcement activity and to establish new policies for training and supervising MCSD personnel." [Dkt. # 266 at 2]. That "inter alia" disguises in Latin three pages of requested judicial mandates, comprising ten separate paragraphs, not to mention sub-paragraphs. [Dkt. # 1 at 83-85]. As Cook exemplifies, the necessity analysis approved by the Fifth Circuit has been applied in cases involving both prohibitory and mandatory injunctions. Indeed, the very breadth of the relief they seek renders plaintiffs inadequate as class representatives under the binding precedent of Horton v. Goose Creek Ind. Sch. Dist., 690 F.2d 470 (5th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1207 (1983). Their prayer for class certification must be overruled.

ARGUMENT

I. PLAINTIFFS' CLAIM FOR BROAD AFFIRMATIVE RELIEF NEVER APPROVED BY AN APPELLATE COURT DOES NOT RENDER CERTIFICATION NECESSARY.

Plaintiffs' principal argument is that "[c]lass certification is necessary because the scope of the injunctive and declaratory relief available could otherwise be limited by the specific injuries suffered by the Plaintiffs themselves." [Dkt. #266 at 12]. The notion that the class could include members complaining of injuries their representatives had not suffered is particularly remarkable in light of the Supreme Court's reaffirmation that all class members must "have suffered the same injury.” Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes, 564 U.S. 338, 350 (2011), quoting General Tel. Co. v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 157 (1982). As plaintiffs acknowledge [Dkt. # 266 at 13-14], a party is entitled only to equitable relief that is narrowly tailored to remedy the actual injury. John Doe #1 v. Feneman, 380 F.3d 807, 818 (5th Cir. 2004). It follows that, if the class members have suffered the same injury as the class representatives, then the class members can be entitled only to the same narrowly defined remedy as the class representatives themselves.

Plaintiffs cite no case in which a class has been held entitled to relief broader than what would have been appropriate for the class members themselves. Instead, they rely on a single quote rendered by the Fifth Circuit before class certification and long before final judgment: “If plaintiff’s action here were stripped of its class character, Jones would lack standing to complain of conditions, practices, and procedures that had not touched him personally.” Jones v. Diamond, 519 F.2d 1090, 1095 (5th Cir. 1975). The Court made that statement, not in the context of approving final relief, but of securing jurisdiction over Judge Cox’s summary denial of class certification. The Court reasoned that the denial of certification limited the scope of injunctive relief, thereby authorizing immediate interlocutory appeal under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b) as an order denying an injunction in part. The Court did not specify what relief the class might have obtained that Jones alone could not. Indeed, plaintiffs cite no case where any appellate court has identified any such relief.

The comment in Jones has not been renewed since Falcon, and certainly not since Wal-Mart. In Falcon, a class representative claiming denial of a promotion on account of race had been certified to represent a class not only of those wrongfully denied promotions but those wrongfully denied jobs. 457 U.S. at 152. The Supreme Court held that he could not represent those who had been denied jobs because he had not suffered that injury. Id., at 157-58.¹ Similarly, in Wal-Mart, the named plaintiffs sought to represent a broad class of women complaining of sex discrimination, but the Supreme Court held that the members of the proposed class had been injured, if at all, in a multitude of different ways. 564 U.S. at 359-60 & n.10.²

Although it had no occasion to consider the statement in Jones, the Fifth Circuit in M.D. ex rel. Stukenberg v. Perry, 675 F.3d 832 (5th Cir. 2012), recognized that Wal-Mart had significantly changed its prior class certification jurisprudence. Not only had the commonality test become more stringent, id., at 840, but the appropriateness of certification under Rule 23(b)(2) plainly requires “[t]he uniformity of the injury across the class.” Id., at 845. In Perry, as here, plaintiffs sought broad affirmative relief to control the conduct of public officials. Agreeing with the defendants that “the class members have not been harmed in essentially the same way,” id., at 846, the Court reversed the grant of certification because plaintiffs sought relief inapplicable to all class members. Id., at 846-47. The Court concluded that plaintiffs had “attempted to aggregate a plethora of discrete claims challenging aspects of Texas’s [program] into one ‘super-claim.’” Id., at 848. The similarity to these plaintiffs’ super-claim against every aspect of law enforcement by the MCSD is obvious.

² It is telling that the other Fifth Circuit cases on which plaintiffs rely, Bing v. Roadway Express, Inc., 485 F.2d 441 (5th Cir. 1973), and Jenkins v. United Gas Corp., 400 F.2d 28 (5th Cir. 1968), likewise antedate Falcon and Wal-Mart. It is true that Rule 23(b)(2) may be used “to challenge racially discriminatory policies and practices” [Dkt. # 266 at 4], but all of the necessary criteria must nevertheless be met.

For plaintiffs to be able to take advantage of the statement in Jones, assuming that it has survived Falcon, Wal-Mart, and Perry, it should be incumbent upon them to say what part of their relief they cannot obtain without class certification. Certainly, they do not believe that a prohibitory injunction can be denied them. Indeed, they characterize Arnett v. Combs, 508 F.3d 1134 (5th Cir. 2007), aff'g, 515 F. Supp. 2d 690 (W.D. Tex. 2006), cert. denied, 553 U.S. 1005 (2008), and United Farmworkers of Florida Housing Project, Inc. v. City of Delray Beach, 493 F.2d 799 (5th Cir. 1976), as cases in which prohibitory injunctions against unconstitutional policies were granted without class certification. Attempting to distinguish those cases, plaintiffs offer extensive discussion of the affirmative oversight they want this Court to provide [Dkt. # 266 at 14-16], without quite saying that they cannot get it without class certification.

The fact is that they have no relevant authority entitling them to such extensive intrusion into the operations of the MCSD. They rely on Morrow v. Washington, 277 F.R.D. 172 (E.D. Tex. 2011), as granting relief against “systemic deficiencies or unwritten policies that result in class-wide constitutional violations” [Dkt. # 266 at 11], but Morrow provided no affirmative relief at all. Plaintiffs there claimed that an “interdiction program” of traffic stops of minorities violated the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments, id., at 178, but the Court granted certification only on the Fourteenth Amendment question of whether “Defendants targeted racial and ethnic minorities for selective enforcement of traffic laws.” Id., at 190. For that reason, the Court decided that it could enter a prohibitory injunction against discriminatory stops, but not affirmative mandates designed to protect against Fourth Amendment violations “concerning detentions, arrests, searches, or seizures.” Id., at 198.

Plaintiffs are correct [Dkt. # 266 at 11] that this Court certified a class to seek extensive affirmative relief in Dockery v. Fischer, 253 F. Supp. 3d 832 (S.D. Miss. 2015), but Dockery is an Eighth Amendment case concerning jail conditions. Affirmative relief is necessary in Eighth Amendment cases because the government has affirmative obligations to those it incarcerates. “Prison officials must provide humane conditions of confinement; they must ensure that inmates receive adequate food, clothing, shelter, and medical care, and must take reasonable measure to ensure the safety of the inmates.” Gates v. Cook, 376 F.3d 323, 332 (5th Cir. 2004). Plaintiffs cite no case in which an appellate court has approved affirmative relief like that sought here with regard to supposed Fourth and Fourteenth Amendment violations by a law enforcement agency.

Notwithstanding the language in Jones, then, Perry makes it plain that class representatives and class members must have suffered the same injury and must therefore be entitled to the same relief. Under Arnett, United Farmworkers, and Cook, these plaintiffs may seek a prohibitory injunction that will be identical to any injunction that could be issued on behalf of the class. They have provided no reason to think that they are entitled to a mandatory injunction at all, much less that they need class certification to get it.

II. THE NATURE OF THE RELIEF SOUGHT BY PLAINTIFFS DOES NOT PRECLUDE APPLICATION OF A NECESSITY ANALYSIS.

In arguing their entitlement to class certification to pursue a mandatory injunction, plaintiffs argue that a necessity analysis has been conducted only in cases of simple prohibitory injunctions. “In each of these cases, resolving the plaintiffs’ claims primarily required a change to the statute, regulation or policy itself; the plaintiffs did not require, as here, extensive affirmative relief to ensure that the change to the statute, regulation or policy was appropriately and comprehensively implemented.” [Dkt. # 266 at 9].³ It is not true that those cases simply prohibited enforcement of unconstitutional policies, although it is true that prohibitory injunctions have conferred broad benefits upon large groups.

The Fifth Circuit has repeatedly recognized that courts, without certifying a class, may issue prohibitory injunctions which inure to the benefit of all persons injured by an unconstitutional policy. Plaintiffs cannot and do not dispute that the practice goes back at least as far as Potts v. Flax, 313 F.2d 284 (5th Cir. 1963), which ordered desegregation of the schools in Fort Worth, and Bailey v. Patterson, 323 F.2d 201 (5th Cir. 1963), cert. denied, 376 U.S. 910 (1964), which ordered the desegregation of public transportation facilities in Jackson. Even after the 1966 amendment which created Rule 23(b)(2), United Farmworkers and Arnett prohibited unconstitutional practices without the necessity of class certification. Relying on United Farmworkers and Bailey, this Court denied certification in Cook because “the relief which is sought will have the same effect as a class action whether the class is certified or not.” 575 F. Supp. at 489.

Plaintiffs seek to diminish the import of these cases by describing them as “involv[ing] very narrow questions concerning the constitutionality of the statute, regulation or policy” [Dkt. # 266 at 8], or “straightforward challenges to statutes or regulations capable of redress through a simple prohibitory decree or injunction.” [Dkt. # 266 at 2]. That characterization would come as a surprise to anyone who lived through desegregation in the South. It certainly fails to describe Cook, where this Court imposed a remedial plan encompassing 17 pages of the Federal Supplement, 575 F. Supp. at 491-07, or United Farmworkers, where the Fifth Circuit ordered affirmative relief requiring the City “to issue the requested letter of confirmation and to allow the farmworkers’ housing project to tie into the City’s water and sewer system.” 493 F.2d at 812. It is not true that the cases in this Court and in the Fifth Circuit have been limited to constitutional violations which can “simply be redressed by an injunction against violating the Constitution.” [Dkt. # 266 at 2].⁴

It is true, however, that simple prohibitory injunctions have provided historic relief to injured groups. Here, the only prohibitory injunction these plaintiffs seek, in ¶ B of their prayer for relief [Dkt. # 1 at 82], is an injunction against violating the Constitution. They admit [Dkt. # 266 at 15 n.8] this Court’s declaration that “injunctive relief must be specific” under Rule 23(b)(2), Dockery, 253 F. Supp. 3d at 851, but they say that the relevant question at the class certification stage is whether “the class members’ claim is such that a sufficiently specific injunction can be conceived.” Id. If plaintiffs could conceive of a specific injunction, they should have said so long before now. They have not.

Plaintiffs claim to have proven the existence of “Defendants’ unconstitutional Policing Program” and seek “[t]o ensure that these racially discriminatory programs are dismantled.” [Dkt. # 266 at 2]. If they have actually provided proof of an unconstitutional program, they should be able to say with specificity what the program is. Instead, plaintiffs seek only to order that Sheriff Tucker stop violating the Constitution.

In prior cases this Court and the Fifth Circuit have identified the specific policy that violates the Constitution and prohibited its enforcement. Horton did not simply order the school district to stop violating the Fourth Amendment; it decided exactly what conduct violated the Fourth Amendment and so declared. In Potts the Fifth Circuit found an unconstitutional segregated school system in Fort Worth and ordered an end to it; in Bailey it found an unconstitutional segregated public transportation system in Jackson and ordered an end to it; in United Farmworkers, it found an unconstitutional exclusion of farmworkers' housing from the public water system and ordered an end to it; in Arnett it found an unconstitutional deprivation of property under a Texas statute and ordered an end to it. Similarly, in Cook this Court found an unconstitutional districting plan in Madison County and ordered an end to it.

This Court, as Fifth Circuit precedent recognizes, is fully capable of identifying and prohibiting policies proven to be unconstitutional. Plaintiffs do not need class certification to do that. They do need to demonstrate that a sufficiently specific prohibitory injunction can be formulated on the basis of the proof they claim to have presented.

III. SHADY GROVE LEAVES INTACT THE FIFTH CIRCUIT'S NECESSITY ANALYSIS UNDER RULE 23(b)(2).

Defendants have made plain from the outset that their argument that class certification is not necessary rests on the requirement of Rule 23(b)(2) that the requested injunctive and declaratory relief must be "appropriate respecting the class as a whole." [Dkt. # 238 at 2]. The Supreme Court of the United States in Shady Grove could not and did not reject that position because it expressly declined to consider any portion of Rule 23(b). 559 U.S. at 396 n.2. Notwithstanding Shady Grove, the Third Circuit six years later, in an opinion consistent with Fifth Circuit precedent, confirmed that courts should consider whether injunctive relief is appropriate before certifying a class under Rule 23(b)(2). Gayle v. Warden Monmouth Co. Correctional Inst., 838 F.3d 297, 310 (3d Cir. 2016).

The Supreme Court had no occasion to consider in Shady Grove the circumstances in which certification of Rule 23(b)(2) class might be appropriate. The question was whether a New York statute prohibiting class actions regarding particular state law claims "precludes a federal district court sitting in diversity from entertaining a class action under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23.” 559 U.S. at 396. To answer that question, the Court analyzed the four criteria established by Rule 23(a). Id., at 398-99. The Court acknowledged that a class claim “also must fit into one of the three categories described in subdivision (b),” id., at 398, but it gave no analysis of how that might be done. The Court simply concluded that, where all the criteria of Rule 23 are satisfied, a contrary state statute “cannot apply in diversity suits.” Id., at 399. Shady Grove does nothing except to apply the traditional standard that federal procedure rules displace state procedural rules in federal court, a proposition not in dispute in this case.

Despite plaintiffs’ enthusiasm for the language of Shady Grove, they do not argue that it sets forth a holding which would overturn United Farmworkers and Bailey, upon which this Court relied in Cook. The guidance provided by those cases, as well as Arnett and Johnson v. City of Opelousas, 658 F.2d 1065 (5th Cir. 1981), is not changed by Shady Grove and must be applied here.

Despite their criticism of the necessity analysis, plaintiffs acknowledge that courts continue to apply it. The Third Circuit in Gayle undertook to specify the considerations that govern whether declaratory or injunctive relief may be appropriate under Rule 23(b)(2). The Court acknowledged “circumstances where class certification is not appropriate because in view of the declaratory or injunctive relief ordered on an individual basis, there would be no meaningful additional benefit to prospective class members in ordering classwide relief.” 838 F.3d at 310. Gayle recognized that there may be circumstances where certification would serve a useful purpose. Those considerations include “the risk of mootness, the possibility of defendant’s non-acquiescence in the court’s decision, or where class certification would not burden the court.” Id., citing Dionne

v. Bouley, 757 F.2d 1344, 1356 (1st Cir. 1985). Fifth Circuit precedents address all three of those possibilities.

The Fifth Circuit acknowledged the importance of the mootness consideration in Johnson, which involved claims on behalf of juveniles who would become adults in due course. 658 F.2d at 1070. Here, several plaintiffs may have mooted their claims by leaving Madison County, but there is no reason to believe that all will do so before this Court can enter judgment. Indeed, if plaintiffs are correct that they can leave Madison County and still represent a class [Dkt. # 266 at 19-20 & n.12], it is hard to imagine how they believe mootness could ever happen.

This is hardly a case where “class certification would not burden the court.” Gayle, 838 F.3d at 310. The Fifth Circuit in Arnett endorsed the opinion of the District Court, which noted that the denial of class certification for lack of any useful purpose naturally eliminated the “need for an evidentiary hearing on the issue.” 515 F. Supp. 2d at 698. As must be apparent from the massive amount of paperwork filed regarding plaintiffs’ motion for class certification, the elimination of the hearing on class certification will spare this Court’s time and massive expense to the parties.

Plaintiffs do not quite accuse Sheriff Tucker of willingness to defy any injunction this Court may enter, but they emphasize the need for “comprehensive oversight and remediation procedures” [Dkt. # 266 at 19], which is a nice way of threatening to jail him for contempt. The Fifth Circuit in Bailey described very well what “non-acquiescence” looks like, but the Court found no need to certify a class in order to secure enforcement of its orders. 323 F.2d at 206. Where enforcement becomes necessary, nonparties may seek the Court’s aid so long as standing can be demonstrated. Moore v. Tangipahoa Parish Sch. Bd., 625 F.2d 33, 34 (5th Cir. 1980) (applying Fed. R. Civ. P. 71). Plaintiffs complain of the need to show standing [Dkt. # 266 at 17 n.9], but

“the elements of Article III standing are constant throughout litigation.” In re Deepwater Horizon, 739 F.3d 790, 799 (5th Cir. 2014). Certainly, anyone who asks this Court to jail Sheriff Tucker should be able to show injury from something he has done or failed to do.⁵

Accordingly, the application of a necessity analysis under these Fifth Circuit precedents does not “effectively nullify Rule 23(b)(2),” as plaintiffs assert. [Dkt. # 266 at 3]. Both the Fifth Circuit, as in Johnson, and this Court, as in Dockery, have approved certification of classes under Rule 23(b)(2) under appropriate circumstances. A complaint challenging jail conditions, like Dockery, is one where the Fifth Circuit has found that mootness may pose a problem. Jones, 519 F.2d at 1095-96. Although this Court in Dockery was not asked to perform a necessity analysis, Jones suggests that certification might be appropriate because the named plaintiffs would eventually be released from prison. Madison County is not a prison, and plaintiffs will not be pushed out the door at any time in the future. Moreover, while wardens really do have affirmative obligations under the Eighth Amendment to persons in their custody, Dockery, 253 F. Supp. 3d at 855-56, Sheriff Tucker’s obligation to these plaintiffs under the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments is simply to refrain from affirmative violations of their rights. That protection really can be provided by a simple prohibitory injunction, if plaintiffs can ever specify what they want. Taken together, Dockery and Cook accurately portray the different situations in which certification under Rule 23(b)(2) is and is not appropriate.

Thus, neither Shady Grove nor any other case undercuts the decision made by this Court in Cook. Johnson, Arnett, and Moore provide sound guidance for the application of the necessity analysis undertaken in United Farmworkers. As in Bailey, this Court may grant any appropriate relief without the certification of a class, and it has authority to ensure that its orders are followed. Plaintiffs can ask no more.

IV. HORTON PRECLUDES CERTIFICATION OF A CLASS FOR REMEDIAL PURPOSES.

Even if plaintiffs were correct that the nature of the remedy they seek precludes the application of the Fifth Circuit's necessity analysis, that very fact forbids certification here. These plaintiffs are absolutely precluded from representing a remedial class by Horton.

Horton, of course, sheds no direct light on the necessity analysis because defendants there do not appear to have raised the issue in opposition to certification. Instead, they argued that conflicts of interest within the proposed class rendered plaintiffs inadequate as class representatives, as defendants have argued in this case.⁶ The Fifth Circuit rejected the adequacy argument with regard to the issue of liability, but upheld it with regard to the issue of remedy:

There may also be disagreement among class members over appropriate relief. On that issue, we cannot depend on the defendant to represent the views of all absentees. As a result, we direct certification on the issue of liability only, a procedure explicitly provided by Rule 23(c)(4)(A).

690 F.2d at 488 n.33. Plaintiffs' argument that the certification of a remedial class satisfies any consideration of necessity runs aground on their failure to meet the requirement of adequacy.

Horton is particularly pertinent to the circumstances of this case. Unlike every contested case upon which plaintiffs rely in their brief, Horton is actually a Fourth Amendment case.⁷ The ⁶ Defendants' brief opposing class certification explains why Horton does not support a finding of adequacy with regard to any aspect of plaintiffs' claims for relief. [Dkt. # 268 at 58-59].

⁷ Daniels v. City of New York, 199 F.R.D. 513 (S.D.N.Y. 2001), was resolved by a consent decree. See Floyd v. City of New York, 283 F.R.D. 153, 160 (S.D.N.Y. 2012). After the Second Circuit disqualified the District Judge presiding over the subsequent litigation, Ligon v. City of New York, 736 F.3d 118 (2d Cir. 2013), the newly-elected mayor dismissed the appeal. Floyd v. City of New York, 770 F.3d 1051 (2d Cir. 2014).

Court held that the use of dogs to sniff public school students for contraband violated the Fourth Amendment “when there is no individualized suspicion.” Id., at 482. Having declared the defendant to have violated the Fourth Amendment, the Fifth Circuit nevertheless held that a class could not be certified on the issue of determining a remedy for that violation, because of disagreements within the class. The same principle applies here. Presume, for the sake of argument, that these plaintiffs could prove that Sheriff Tucker had established a policy of using dogs to sniff every pedestrian “in the vicinity of the Apartment Complexes” mentioned in their proposed common questions. [Dkt. # 232 at 36]. While this Court might be able to issue a declaration of unconstitutionality, as the Fifth Circuit did in Horton, 690 F.2d at 488, plaintiffs would be inadequate representatives of a class regarding the issue of remedy. That is because the record unequivocally shows that a number of Black residents of those apartments believe that they need the protection that Sheriff Tucker provides, and they appreciate that protection.⁸

That is exactly the reasoning that this Court used to deny certification in Cook. In that redistricting case, there was not much dispute about liability. “There has been no attempt to redistrict the county since at least 1890.” 575 F. Supp. at 489. The question for decision was not liability, but remedy. Rejecting certification, this Court said:

It is also clear from the configuration of the parties that there is more than a chance that neither of the competing representatives could fully and fairly represent all the members of the proposed classes because of the substantial conflict, not necessarily along racial lines, which separate not only the two sets of plaintiffs, but many of the people of Madison County on the issues of this case.

Id. This record affirmatively discloses that the people of Madison County are in “substantial conflict, not necessarily along racial lines,” with regard to the practices of Sheriff Tucker which plaintiffs challenge here. Plaintiffs’ request for “affirmative injunctive relief of sufficiently broad scope to redress the class-wide harms at issue here, and to provide workable enforcement mechanisms for unnamed class members to enforce such relief” [Dkt. # 266 at 3], is opposed by a significant number of members of the proposed class. For that reason, Horton declares that plaintiffs cannot be adequate representatives of the class with regard to the remedy they seek.

Respectfully submitted this 22nd day of May, 2018.
